THE BULLETIN:

BY EDWARD E. HUTCHISON.

LATEST NEWS.

FIRST EDITION.

Friday Morning, Jan'y. 9, '63.

BY TELEGRAPH.

Later from the United States.

[Telegraphed by the Southern Associated Press Agent.]

PETERSBURG, Jan. 7.

The Philadelphia Enquirer of the 4th inst. has been received.

The Paris correspondent of the Commercial, writing under date of December 15th, says:

There is no doubt a secret League has been formed between Slidell and the French Government, Slidell being naturally interested in the affairs of New Orleans where his property has been confiscated, and the French Government looks upon Louisiana as almost a French Province.

The arrival of a French fleet at New Orleans was received with great joy by the Southerners, and the official journals announced the fact in terms which would have been offensive to any Government but that of the United States, and says that although the indications for the moment are that, while a better feeling is growing up towards us in England, the contrary is true of France.

Gen. Wool has superseded Gov. Morgan in command of the Department of New York.

Smith, of the Interior, has resigned and gone home.

Rumor says Lincoln was shot at and his coachman wounded, while riding homeward on New Year's eve.

The grand Reception Levee by Lincoln was largely attended by Congressmen and Foreign Ministers.

The Enquirer says the whole movement of the army of the rebels show that they made a desperate exertion to cut Grant's army off, and that the movement was planned by Jeff Davis himself, but it signally failed.

The Captain of the bark Trent reports the destruction of his vessel by a new rebel privateer on the 5th of December and himself and crew set adrift.

Nothing later or interesting from Murfreesboro.

Later from the United States.

RICHMOND, Jan. 7.

McClellan is to be sent to Fortress Monroe to organize an army there.

The Baltimore American says he will soon resume offensive operations against Richmond by way of the James.

The Washington Chronicle of the 5th says a fight is imminent on the Blackwater.

Lincoln has approved the Bill admitting Western Virginia as a State of the Union, after keeping it in his pocket nine days.

The Baltimore American gives an account of another Expedition.

Gen. Nagle, with his division, embarked on Transports at Yorktown and Gloucester Point. The fleet put to sea on the 1st instant, and is composed of enough troops to take hold of any point on the Southern coast.

The destination of the Expedition is supposed to be North Carolina, but as a number of iron clads accompany it, it is presumed it will go to some important Southern point, say Charleston, Georgetown, Savannah or Mobile.

At a meeting of the New York Chamber of Commerce it leaked out that Wilmington was soon to be attacked, not knowing whether Nagle commands the Expedition or not.

The Chicago Times says two thirds of the Kentucky Legislature have signified their determination to take the State out of the Union if Lincoln attempts to enforce his Emancipation Proclamation.

From Chattanooga.

RICHMOND, Jan. 7.

Dispatches received here say Chattanooga says our army fell back to Murfreesboro on Saturday night after Murfreesboro battle, during which Breckinridge's division was repulsed.

The enemy entered Murfreesboro on the morning of the 5th.

A Collision,

RALEIGH, Jan. 7.

Two freight trains bound for Petersburg from this point, on the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad, starting respectively at 5 and 5:30, a. m., had a smash up to-day. It seems about ten cars came uncoupled, on going up a heavy grade at Crab Tree, about three miles from here, and coming down came in collision with the train following, thereby breaking to pieces three or four cars and the engine, and spilling about fifteen or twenty hogsheads of sugar belonging to the Government.

The soldiers encamped there made an onslaught on the sugar and came off triumphant, filling pockets, handkerchiefs, carpet sacks, buckets and everything available they could find. Only one person was hurt and he was a fireman—not seriously. It is thought this break up will cost the road a considerable amount.

From Virginia.

RICHMOND, Jan. 7.

The Lynchburg Republican says the Federals are rapidly reconstructing the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The mails are running regularly east of Martinsburg.

The Federals still occupy Winchester and continue their depredations in the Valley.

Nothing of interest from the line.

ANOTHER RAID.

ROANOKE, Jan. 7.

Gen. Hampton made a dash into Dumfries, on Friday, capturing wagons, stores, &c.

Virginia Legislature.

RICHMOND, Jan. 7.

The Virginia House of Delegates reassembled at 12 o'clock to day.

Hugh W. Sisty, of Staunton, was elected Speaker, vice George Kemper, resigned.

The Governor's Message was received. It is a lengthy but an interesting document.

The House, by resolution, fixed upon Tuesday the 13th inst. to elect a Confederate States Senator, vice Hon. Ballard Preston, deceased.

Maj Gen. Floyd and his State Line are complimented by the Governor for valuable services.

In reference to prisoners captured by Gen. Floyd, he says eight of them will be held as hostages for ZRAVONA, who has been in confinement since July, 1861.

The Governor says Virginia will never consent to a settlement between the Confederate and Federal Governments unless in it is included the restoration of her territory just admitted by the Federal Congress as a State.

He concludes that the war upon the South—a majority attempting to wrest from a minority their rights and property—is not for the purpose of preserving the Union, for they can never again be united—for the severance of 45 counties from the State and their admittance as a State into the Union is an acknowledgement of the hopelessness of their cause, and he who preaches the doctrine of reconstruction is a traitor and deserves a traitor's doom.

The message is specially severe upon extortioners.

From the West.

MOBILE, Jan. 7.

The Advertiser & Register has a dispatch, dated Granada 6th, says, an aid of Gen. Forrest has arrived this evening who reports the capture of Ty[illegible] Union city, and Humbolt with over [illegible]0 prisoners, two cannon and a large amount of commissary stores.

The attack on Jackson was a feint to cover their operations. The railroad is destroyed between Jackson and Columbus.

Later From Europe

RICHMOND, Jan. 6.

The steamship Asia has arrived at New York, with news from Europe to the 20th ult.

Vague rumors are afloat that France will send another note to England and Russia, showing the necessity of peaceful intervention in America.

The London Times believes, from the liberality shown towards Lancashire, that a clearer perception of the part displayed by England during the war prevails.

Mr. Schoolfield, M. P., in a speech asserted the right of the South to secede, and advocated recognition. Bright eulogized the course of the North, and predicted the failure of the rebellion. Nearly all the London Journals copied Bright's speech.

A loan was spoken of in France to relieve the distress prevailing.

The Times disparages Halleck's official report.

Payment of State Bounty Due Deceased Soldiers.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, N. C.,
ADJUTANT GEN'L'S OFFICE,
Raleigh, Oct. 17, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 9.

The following regulations are published for the information of those persons wishing to draw bounty of deceased soldiers, in accordance with an ordinance of the Convention ratified the 23d day of February, 1862:

REGULATIONS.

1. The payment of bounty to the representatives of deceased soldiers is based upon the certificate of the commanding officer of the company, who will state the time of the enlistment of the soldier, the date of his decease in service, the amount of bounty already paid by the State, and the company and regiment to which he belonged.

2. The claimant will make affidavit before a magistrate that he or she is the next kin to the deceased, according to the provisions of the foregoing ordinance of the Convention, and that there is no other person entitled to make claim. The affidavit of the claimant must be sustained by that of one disinterested witness, that the facts stated are correct within his own knowledge and that he has no interest in the claim. The magistrate administering the oath will certify to the credibility of the witness, and the clerk of the County Court will certify, under seal, that he is an authorized and acting magistrate.

3. If the claimant or claimants be minors, payment will be made to the guardian, upon the production of the proper certificate under the seal of the Court, of his appointment and the sufficiency of his bond—the claim to be proved by him as in other cases.

4. A bounty of fifty dollars, deducting the bounty that may have been previously paid, is due to all persons who may have volunteered for three years or the war, and to all persons mustered into or continued in service under the provisions of the Conscription Act.

HEADQUARTERS 34TH REGT. N. C. T.,
Near Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 1.

MR. EDITOR: The officers and men of this Regiment desire thus publicly to return their grateful acknowledgements to the following patriotic ladies of Rutherford county, N. C., for a handsome contribution of shirts, socks, gloves and hospital supplies:

Mrs M E Miller, Mrs R G Twitty, Mrs M E Dickerson, Mrs M A Camp, Miss Mary Ann Miller, Miss Caroline Miller, Miss Mittie Twitty, Miss Eliza A Gray, Miss Lieu Littlejohn.

We assure our fair friends that these articles, coming so opportunely as they did amid frost and snow, were gratefully appreciated by us all. Such instances of devotion to our cause as the daughters of the South have so often and nobly evinced, by their ceaseless and self-sacrificing labors for our sick, wounded and needy soldiers, will continue to cheer us on through dangers, and will nerve our arms and strengthen our hearts, in the hour of battle, to strike yet harder for freedom, home and the loved ones there.

Gov. Seymour's First Act.

The first act of Gov. Seymour was to notify the Commissioners of the New York Metropolitan police to appear at Albany to answer four charges, the substance of them being the permission given the police to make arbitrary arrests, against the Constitution and laws of the United States and State of New York, and for allowing prisons to be used for the confinement of persons who had committed no crime; and for allowing John A. Kennedy to issue an order previous to the November election, for the purpose of intimidating voters by threatening their detention in station houses, subject to the order of the Secretary of War.

At last accounts, though the time had expired, the Commissioners had not appeared, which, the "Herald" says, is proof of their guilt, and remarks that they will at once be dismissed, and no more arbitrary arrests will be allowed.

Lieut. Richard A. Stitt, of Union county, an officer of co A, 48th N. C. Regt., died recently in Richmond of pneumonia.

Lieut. Sugar Dulin, of Mecklenburg county, also an officer of the 48th N. C. Regt., died in Virginia from the effects of a wound received in the battle of Fredericksburg.—Raleigh Progress.

Horrors of a Bombardment.

The following are some extracts from a private leter of a young lady who remained in Fredericksburg during the late bombardment, to a neighbor, at present sojourning as a refugee in Lynchburg. They possess deep interest for our readers:

On Thursday, December 11, we were awakened by two cannon. At 5 o'clock we arose and dressed. About six the firing began in earnest. We packed our trunks amid it all, made a fire in the cellar, and thither repaired. We had not been there an hour when a shell went through our attic room, breaking bedsteads, etc. One shot went through the parlor; five in all went through the house. As they passed, the crash they made seemed to threaten instant death to all; it sounded as though the house were tumbling in, and would bury us in its ruins. We knew the danger, but our trust was in God, and we were calm. Aunt Clara (the colored woman who lives opposite) was with us. Darkness came on, and the cannonading ceased. B. went to the gate and returned with the news that there was fire in different parts of the city, and that a company of our men were at the corner firing on the pontoon bridge. Though the bombardment had ceased, the musketry sounded to my ears more awful, for I knew they were fighting in the streets. My ears were suddenly shocked by a shout of demoniacal glee—"Here are the rebels! here are the d—d rebels! fire, boys! fire! Two dreadful cries rent the air—our gallant Capt Cook is killed at our corner. To hear the fiendish cry of the enemy unnerved me more than the explosion of the thousands of shell that burst around us.

All being now quiet for a time, we lie down, but not to sleep; for hark! they are breaking into houses like so many demons. With terrible force they throw themselves against our doors, back and front, but an officer (Yankee, though he was,) saved us. We hear them break into your house but dare not utter a word, lest they slay us. Oh! who can tell the horrors of that night! * * They order my father out, that he has wine in his cellar, &c. He assures them he has only his unoffending wife and eight children there.

Thus passed the night, the fire still raging. About eight o'clock the flames burst forth in our vicinity, and we expect every moment to find our own roof on fire. In the midst of the excitement a soldier rushed in with his bayonet, which he pointed at my father's breast and ordered him to follow him. My father asked why? but the manner in which he repeated the order convinced him that he must follow or die. This occurred at the back porch; I was at that time in the front porch watching the sparks and expecting our house every moment to take fire. They carried father to headquarters, and after accusing him of firing on them from his house, he was released, the officer before whom he was arraigned reading a lie in the face of the accuser, and innocence in that of the accused. While he was gone, soldiers came to me at the front door, and to mother behind, and assured us that the house was on fire; but such was not the case. The trick did not succeed, nor did the story afford them the opportunity they sought to rob the house. * * *

The next day every unoccupied house was plundered and every piece of furniture destroyed. In order to save your furniture we told aunt Clara to move to your house which she did. You would have had nothing left but for this. The first night they took a crock of lard, and ate up your preserves and pickles. Your candles, also, they made way with, but we do not know of anything else. They pulled everything out of your drawers and trunks, burst open closets, etc. No shell went through your house, and if you saw the sufferings of most of the people you would think you had fared well. Mr A. has lost everything—his store, furniture, etc.; his house is riddled with shell, and his wife and child with nothing to wear but what they have on. Hundreds are in the same situation. As shell were being thrown by our our men on Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, we spent each of those days chiefly in the cellar, as well as Thursday; thus five days in all.

Mary Price, a black woman, was killed by a shell—cut quite in two. She had gotten, for protection, under a bed in a room through which a shell passed. I saw her on Wednesday. She had been killed the previous Thursday, but there was no one to bury her. * * Every house not inhabited has been sacked and ruined inside. They committed every species of outrage.

THE BATTLE OF FREDERICKSBURG.

From the Whig.]

BY MRS. M. S. WHITAKER.

A misty morn on Stafford's hills arose,
Where marshalled ranks confront a host of foes:
In Rappahannock's vales the invaders stand,
Advancing war arouses all the land.

Artillery roars,—the rattling death shot fly,
Bright spears gleam forth—broad banners wave on high,
The maddened war-horse bounds along the plain,
And shouts arise of terror, wrath and pain.

O, valorous South! thy wrongs for vengeance call,
Dismayed, thy foemen halt,—they fly,—they fall.
Brave Longstreet thunders, dreadful, in their rear,
And Jackson's flag victorious sweeps the air.

The mists disperse—the sun gleams out serene.
But battle-clouds and blood deform the scene,
Prone in the dust the gory courser lies,
Beside his rider, never more to rise.

The field is won,—that crimson field of flame:—
Exult, O, South,—thy foes depart with shame,
The vulture flaps his baleful wings, and hies
Back, cowering, to his rocks and murky skies,

Rejoice, fair sisters of the radiant South,
Yet, laurel-crowned, come slowly weeping forth.
Mourn for the slain, bright daughters of the Sun,
Who come no more from battles fought and won.

Georgia! lament the gallant and the brave
Thy own true Cobb sleeps in the soldier's grave
Rehearse his deeds, and, in sad accents tell
How great his life, how gloriously he fell!

Mourn Carolina! Midst the princely dead
Thy well-beloved Gregg hath bowed his head,
King death, the victor; man could ne'er control
His lofty mind, nor awe his steadfast soul.

Pale lies the hero on a bloody bier.
And calm the look his classic features wear,
Wrapped in the Palmy flag he died to save.*
They bear the warrior to his honored grave,

Beside our martyred dead we vow once more,
No tyrant foot shall tread our native shore,
No chain enthral the land to them so dear,
But Freedom's throne shall rise established here!

*"If it be my lot to die now, I cheerfully yield my life for the Independence of South Carolina.—Gen. Gregg's message to Gov. Pickens.

The President at Mobile.

We copy from the Mobile Advertiser, of the 1st instant, the following synopsis of the President's address to the citizens of that city:

Addressing his fellow-citizens—fellow soldiers, as he might rather call them, since nearly every man in the Confederacy is now a soldier—he alluded to the ties which bound him almost equally to Alabama and Mississippi, for they together formed the territory in which his earlier years were passed, as together they have confronted the foe and emulated each other's deeds on many a recent battle-field. Together, too, they had espoused those doctrines which, if they had been sooner adopted by the entire country, would have averted this horrid war.

He then adverted to the progress of events from the time when argument was used with the people of the North to induce them to respect the constitutional compact of our fathers, but they would not; to our proposal that, like Abraham and Lot of old, since we could not agree together, we should peacefully depart to the right and to the left. But even this proposition, in the immemorial spirit of Yankee propagandism was rejected, and they arrogantly assumed the authority to exercise dominion over men who were born to be their masters.

Relying upon their numbers, upon their seventy years of preparation, upon their possession of arms, and ships, and fortresses, and manufactories provided by the taxes they had imposed upon us, they confidently expected to put down the "rebellion," as they termed it, in sixty days. We accepted the pledge of battle, and without arms, with no steel-clad navy, entered upon the contest, trusting to the protection of a just God, and by His favor we had won battles when by all calculations we had been bound to suffer defeat. We are now stronger than we were a year ago, and we are destined to achieve our Independence as sure as the sun rises and sets.

The President spoke of our army, which he styled an army of heroes. In it were boys with the down still upon their cheeks, who were toiling like veterans on the weary march, and in the deadly strife were putting forth energies unsurpassed by men of any age, even when bleeding and dying were seeking only to kill another Yankee ere the last vital drop forsook their heart. Could such a people be conquered?

He knew there were occasional feelings of despondency when clouds overspread our sky, but he cited us to the long struggle of our forefathers against more causes of disappointment than assail us. There was also despondency at the thought that there are those among us unfaithful to our cause, and at the spectacle of hordes of extortioners who are preying upon our necessities. But the tories of the Revolution were immensely more numerous than the disaffected among us. There was much division of sentiment among the people of the colonies, while we are a united people. As for extortioners they are the dregs and refuse of the land. They appear more numerous because the people are absent in the field. Let them be left to the contempt and execration which awaits them hereafter in the presence of those who are now toiling and struggling in this bloody contest.

Of his visit to this point, the purpose was to observe our defences, to see what had been done and what remained to be done for our protection, so that hereafter, when he should hear from us, he might know exactly what we needed. The Mississippi and the Alabama rivers are the two great arteries of the Southwest; they must be defended, and he felt, as he looked upon the masses before him, he could confidently say they shall be defended.

He exhorted the people to second, with all their power, the efforts of the brave soldiers and able comander, to whom their defence has been confided, and to encourage them by their approval without cavilling at the errors which must almost necessarily be committed. Even if they do wrong, sustain them; better that our independence be achieved, no matter by what measures, than submit to the domination of the Yankees, who are seeking to enchain us in the same degrading servitude with themselves, with a baboon for a King.

He thanked the people for the compliment they had tendered him in inviting him to address them, and trusted that they would look generously upon what they might believe to be errorors in the administration of affairs, assuring them that the welfare of the people was the sole motive that actuated him, and to furtherance of that welfare he pledged to the utmost of his energies and to the end of his life.
